ig, these officials say this year's alks appear the most difficult and notentially divisive since the Verailles meeting three years ago.

That meeting ended in a public quarrel between the Reagan administration and its closest West-ern allies over the desirability of trading with the East bloc and was followed by Washington's imposition of trade sanctions against European companies using U.S. technology to help the Soviet Union build a gas pipeline from Siberia.

The principal points of disagreement on economic matters, still unions of the principal points of resolved on the eve of the summit meeting, are the following:

 President François Mitterrand of France, according to close aides, remains determined to stop the summit participants from formally agreeing to open a new round of trade-freeing negotiations next year as the Reagan administration and most other participants want, in order to combat growing protectionist pressure.

• President Mitterrand, these sources say, will not agree to a firm date for trade talks until the negotiating agenda has been decided, developing countries agree to partici-pate and the United States gives a fuller commitment to parallel work on stabilizing the dollar and easing Third World debt problems.

 West Germany, Britain and Japan remain determined to resist growing pressure from the United States, France and Italy to adopt more expansionary economic poli-cies designed to take up the slack left in the world economy as U.S. growth slows.

 European leaders are ready to President Reagan to reduce the U.S. budget deficit and efforts to reduce Japan's high trade surpluses. But they doubt whether either country will be able to make much headway quickly. Some European officials fear

At a meeting of Western finance inisters last month sponsored by the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development. France continued to resist setting a firm date, despite a new U.S. offer to hold parallel talks on stabilizing currencies as President Mitterrand wants. But French officials hinted then that France might give approval at Bonn.

However, Mr. Mitterrand re-peated his claim this week that France could not accept new trade talks without real progress on stabilizing currency values, since it regards the overvalued dollar as the prime cause of protectionist pressure in the United States.

President Ronald Reagan and his wife, Nancy, were greeted Wednesday at Bonn's airport by Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher. Behind them was Arthur A. Burns, the U.S. mbassador, in glasses, and James A. Baker 3d, the U.S. treasury secretary.

New York Times Service BONN - The dominant political issue for Washington's allies at the Bonn economic meeting is the Reagan administration's space weapons program. Considerable talk, but no endorsement of the plan, appears likely.

Publicly and officially, the European and Japanese participants in the meeting, which opens Thursday, say they want the United States to clarify how they could fit into the research aspects of the Strategic Defense Initiative, commonly called "star wars."

But, in fact, none appears to have made up its mind about the extent it wants to become involved as a contractor in developing space weapons under American leadership. Since the program became an issue of public debate this winter, the allies have hovered in a zone of indecision about the plan, offering alternately favorable and critical characterizations of the program.

According to a French official, no summit document is expected to deal extensively with space weap-ons, and any mention of the U.S. program would be in general and national product. on Japan to stimulate its domestic economy, including urgings likely to be renewed at the Bonn summit conference, have rekindled a debate about Japan's fundamental conomic policies.

Although economists attribute Japan's large and growing trade surpluses to the strong dollar and other macroeconomic factors, U.S. officials, such as Secretary of State George P. Shultz, have suggested that a more expansionary posture domestically would help to reverse trade and currency imbalances.

If Japan took steps to stimulate its domestic economy, the argument runs, consumers would have more money to spend on imports and corporations would invest more money in Japan rather than in the United States Treasury bills they now favor. Less demand for the dollar might also spur its fall against the yen, making American products less expensive in Japan, and Japanese products more ex-pensive in the United States.

But demands that the Japanese government adopt a Keynesian posture and spend more to achieve these results are running up against the resolutely non-Keynesian stance of Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone and much of his cabinet.

Host of Reagans in West Germany

Says That Hitler Was His Godfather BONN (AP) - Baron Jörg Adolf Sigismund von Holzschuher, who owns the 17th-century castle where President Ronald Reagan is staying this week, says his godfather was Adolf Hitler. Baron Hobschuher, owner of Gymnich Castle, said he was named after the Nazi leader and was given a silver dish as a gift from Hitler at his christening in a village in northern Bavaria in 1934. Hitler was not present at the christening and Baron Holzschuher never saw him, he said in a telephone interview Wednesday. Nor, he said, did Hitler ever visit the castle, about 18 miles (29 kilometers) outside Bonn.

"It's the first I've heard of it," the White House deputy press sepretary. Peter Roussel said.

ecretary, Peter Roussel, said, Baron Holzschuher said Hitler never had any connection with the castle where Mr. Reagan and his wife, Nancy, arrived Wednesday and were to spend the next five nights during the economic summit meeting. "Hitler was never in Gymnich," Baron Holzschuher said. "I myself was no Nazi. Even if I had wanted to, I would not have had the hance. I wasn't old enough."

"There was never a connection between Gymnich castle and the Nazis," he said. "As far as this place is concerned, really, it should not be embarrassing to the president of the United States."

He said he did not know why Hitler became his godfather, but thought that Hitler had many godchildren born to important German officials of the time. Baron Holzschuher's father, Wilhelm, was a Nazi party member and governor of two districts in Bavaria, he said. Baron Holzschuher was born on March 10, 1934, and christened in a Protestant church in the Bavarian village of Artelshofen.

Animals on Spacelab Now Scientific Tests

Co. 'ed by Our Staff From Dispetches HOUSTON — Scientists aboard the space shuttle Challenger got one balky experiment running Wednesday, but continued to struggle with troubles that included free-floating food and feces from animals on board.

Two foul-smelling waves of par-ticles floated into the weightless Spacelab mounted in Challenger's cargo bay as an astronaut attempted to feed some of the 24 rats and two monkeys carried in cages.

That came a day after an experiment that had gone away sent human urine floating through the Space craft.

Space officials complained that too much attention had been focused on sanitary problems when most of the mission's scientific objectives were being met.

George Fichtl, thief scientist for Spacelab, the $1-billion Europeanbuilt laboratory, gave the mission a rating of "very high." Mr. Fichtl said Tuesday that seven of the nine experiments activated since the mission started Monday were operating. . The crew, which consists of five cientists plus a military commander and pilot, are working in two shifts to staff the Spacelab 24 hours a day. The mission commander is Colonel Robert F. Overmyer and the pilot is Colonel Frederick D. Gregory, both of the Air Force. The scientists are Dr. Norman E. Thagard and Dr. William E. Thornton, both physicians; Don L. Lind, a physicist, Taylor G. Wang, a physicist, and Lodewijk van den

In addition, they had samoled the atmosphere, tested a method of controlling space sickness, conducted successful tests of fluid dynamics and had taken pictures of dawn light over the planet's poles.

New York Times Service WASHINGTON - The Republican-controlled Senate has narrowly approved the White House budget package, giving a symbolic victory to President Ronald Reagan as he left for the economic Tuesday's Senate vote of 50-49 climaxed a week of lobbying by the majority leader, Robert J. Dole of Kansas, who wanted to give the compromise budget some momen-tum by beginning the debate with a yes vote on the package as a whole.

Two Republicans voted against the package while four others voted for it after negotiations with Mr.

By that time, attrition had exed the reservoir of young people for the Waffen SS, once an allvolunteer force. More and more people were drafted, not only in Germany, but in occupied areas of Eastern Europe.

Historians note that the Waffen SS became an international entity, with soldiers from the Netherlands. Scandinavia, France, the Baltic countries and the Soviet Union.

At first, the foreigners were gathered in units of their own, like the Galician Division, which consisted mainly of Ukrainians. As the war dragged on, continued shuffling saw many foreigners scattered among Germans. Graves of SS men in Bitburg carry names like Kolmar Chrenko, Emil Jakuberz, Bonifas Dolinski and Georg Zaske.

A historian at West Germany's military archives, in Freiburg, said that, after the Allied landing in Normandy in June 1944, the 2d Division, with perhaps 12,000 men instead of the full complement of 14.000, was ordered north from southwest France to help stem the

with whom it is enjoyed.

We start with "tapas", snacks in amazing variety, eaten at stand-up bars at eight or nine in the evening. That's the time to meet us and make new friends, in the hours before dinner starts at ten or eleven at night.

Then you can maintain the informal note or go to dress-up places serving haute cuisine as splendid as any in Europe. As for us, we love seafood simply prepared, and even hundreds of miles inland you'll find it fresh daily. Our regional dishes are so varied that you might think they come from many countries and cultures. And our

East Europe's Warsaw Pact has sworn brotherhood for another 30 years. The biggest Western countries will do the same this week without putting a date on it. In between, the nonaligned countries of Asia and Africa have celebrated the movement they started in Bandung 30 years ago. Their declaration was reported in small print, but parts of it men't close attention at this week's summit of the seven richest nations.

The Third World has two main problems: famine and debt. They need to be coped with separately. The hungriest require more generous and imaginative programs originating from the richer countries. There are useful new schemes under discussion, including proposals for expanding the World Bank's ability to lend on concessional terms. and President François Mitterrand's ideas for an early information system about approaching famines, a better organized transport system to ship emergency food, and more support for indigenous food production in the afflicted areas.

For many problem countries, however. the right approach is not through public aid and compassion - pity is a cloying sentiment - but through the market, Increasingly, the big debtors are, or intend to be, market-type business centers. The solution to their problems is through the private capital market. They have been hamstrung in recent years because of high interest rates on their massive debt. At present about a fifth of their sparse savings has to flow out to service their debt to the rich countries, instead of being ploughed back into investment at home. With interest rates high and unpredictable, proposals to put a cap on the rates payable by these countries on new loans makes sense. Sudden rises in market rates would be carried forward to future years instead of inflicting an immediate new burden, as happens at present. The major need, however, is to revive private direct investment, on an equity basis, in the nascent industries of these countries. Then, foreign debt obligations will depend on the success of the project rather than on the gyrations of the world money markets. Fixed debt charges will fall. The proposal for a World Bank guarantee scheme to protect private investment against political and commercial risks in indebted nations should be acted upon. Such proposals can help, but the debt problem is going to be with us long.

There are only two windows through which lasting relief can flow. The industrialized countries need to ensure a higher growth of world trade, so that the indebted poor can earn more. And the debtors need to reduce their inflationary excesses and provide conditions to allow private capital to flow into them more safely.

Economic sanity begins at home. The highly indebted countries, instead of reviling the IMF for pushing them into unpopular austerity programs, should recall that it is much easier to deal with poverty and sickness if they can reduce inflation levels and concentrate their public spending on rational economic programs.

The Bandung countries are right to stress their problems. But you cannot help people who do not belp themselves. INTERNATIONAL HERALD TRIBUNE.

Talking Sense in Bonn

As President Reagan goes to West Germany for the annual conference on the world's economy, his administration's views seem to be changing, In his first term, the United States did not see the need to pay much attention to international trade and growth. It assumed that American prosperity would keep rising comfortably, thanks to the Reagan tax cuts. and would draw the other countries along with its own momentum. But now there is a gigantic American trade deficit, accompanied by warnings of an U.S. economic slowdown.

The United States is becoming more receptive than at any time in the past four years to the idea of working cooperatively with the other large industrial democracies - the six that will also be represented at Bonn. Earlier this month Secretary of State George P. Shultz drew the connection between this country's internal budget deficit and its unbalanced foreign trade. Then Secretary of the Treasury James A. Baker 3d proposed a conference on the international monetary system —a subject that the United States had been avoiding because it did not wish to get drawn into arguments about the relationship of the budget deficit to the sky-high exchange rate of the dollar. America now acknowledges that distortions run from its economy to the economies of its major trading partners.

What are the other industrial countries' responsibilities? Just as the United States has to get its trade deficit under control, Japan has to get its trade surplus under control. There, too, progress is coming slowly. Europe's growth rates depend on exports to the United States.

As the American economy decelerates, Europeans - and especially the Germans, whose economy is the European powerhouse - need to find other ways to keep their own expansion going. Many Europeans understand that they are too dependent on a temporary export boom across the Atlantic, but have not looked for other ways to keep their engines running. The past three of these annual summit conferences have been only modestly useful. They all gave great emphasis to the push for lower inflation, which was an important contribution. They also gave great attention to unemployment, with very mixed results - lower unemployment here since 1982, but steadily higher unemployment in Europe. These conferences never got much further into the man-agement of the highly complex system of mon-ey and trade that the industrial powers share, because the Americans were convinced that everything was fine and nothing needed to be done. Now, among the Americans, second thoughts are becoming audible.

That makes possible at least the beginnings of serious conversations at Bonn.

Lebanon: Nation of Mini-States

With the routing of Maronite Christians from their coastal strongholds in southern Lebanon, the "cantonization" of that warravaged country is taking place. Even the facade of a viable central government is crumbling. The nation is being carved into religious mini-states. Lebanon's fate still depends in large measure on its two rival neighbors. Syria and Israel. Since neither has much stomach for the actual partition of Lebanon, having been burned in trying, they exercise control through shifting alliances with factions.

Israel's game plan now that it is withdrawing its army is to count on Christian forces to help protect its northern border from shelling and guerrilla raids. Syria's position is trickier. On the surface, it might seem that President Hafez al-Assad would rejoice in the ascendancy of fundamentalist Shittes in Lebanese polities. They are, after all, influenced by Iran, which is supposed to be Syria's ally. But Mr. Assad opposes whatever faction seems to hold the upper hand. Furthermore, his flirtation with Islamic fundamentalism begins only outside Syria's borders. Inside, Mr. Assad worries about the Moslem Brotherhood.

Israel made the mistake of uniting many Moslem groups against it when it invaded Lebanon almost three years ago. The southern Shiites, for example, were considered friendoverbearing presence of Palestinian refugees. Now they are the most vociferous foes of Israel. But if more and more Palestinians try to return to areas evacuated by Israeli troops, friction between these two groups will rise again. Likewise, the Druze and Sunni communities have their own agendas.

If the present de facto "cantonization" of Lebanon ever reaches the stage where there are attempts to legalize it, there will be fresh trouble. All communal groups have claims against one another, all but the Maronites have vowed overcome arrangements which give the Christians the presidency, a 6-to-5 advantage in the legislature and the command of the army. This may have reflected the demographics of 1943, but not today's demographics.

A loose confederation of communal states hardly reflects the heady dreams that once inspired thoughts of Lebanese nationhood. But if there is one Lebanese characteristic, it is the ability to adapt and, by adapting, to survive. For the beleaguered Christians, survival in an Islamic world may mean exchanging national leadership for an administrative arrangement offering communal security. - The Baltimore Sun.

FROM OUR MAY 2 PAGES, 75 AND 50 YEARS AGO

1910: Laborers Rally in Hyde Park LONDON - A gathering of 25,000 international labor demonstrators marked the May Day celebrations in Hyde Park. The demonstration, the "Standard" says, was of a more imposing character than has ever been witnessed in England. Many nations were represented. Mr. Victor Grayson made his usual violent speech. He said this next summer, unless the Government made some move to provide for the unemployed, he had determined to take the unemployed of London to the gates of the House of Commons. It was no use talking kindly to the House of Commons. One might as well read the Scriptures to a cabhorse. At the close of proceedings resolutions were passed of a Socialistic character.

1935: Soviet Parade Features Military MOSCOW — May Day, which had been observed in Soviet Russia hitherto as the occasion of a demonstration against "capitalism and imperialism," took the form of one of the most formidable military parades witnessed since the World War. The troops, with all the accountements of modern warfare, marched first, in perfect order and with a martial air that Czarist Russia never knew. At the head of this army of 30,000 soldiers rode a detachment of the motorcycle corps. There followed 300 tanks and as many armored cars, together with an array of military trucks. Overhead flew 750 planes. The military parade was followed by the civilian cortege. Banners and huge por-traits of Lenin and Stalin headed every section.

No Quick Reforms Are Likely After Bonn

By Hobart Rowen

WASHINGTON — There really is no mystery about the right course for the leaders at the Bonn economic summit to take: It has been carefully blueprinted by the professional, international civil-service staffs of the International Monetary Fund here in Washington, and the Organization for Economic Coopera-organization for Economic Cooperation and Development in Paris.

It would be a "package deal"—so labeled by OECD Secretary General Jean-Claude Paye—involving a three-way bargain: The United States would sharply cut its budget deficit, thereby reducing interest rates and the overvalued dollar; Europe would attempt to stimulate its rate of growth and shave an appallingly high rate of unemployment; and Japan would make a serious effort to import industrial products at a level typical of a major industrial nation.

But it is easier for the bureaucrats at the OECD and the IMF to lay out a wise course of action than it is for the politicians who go to summit meetings to bite the bullet. Through-out the course of the past 10 summit sessions (they started in 1975 at Ram-bouillet in France), the hope has been that a self-imposed and well-publi-cized international arm-twisting act would make it easier for the politiaans to take unpopular steps when they arrived back home. But it has not worked out that way. For example, heads of state have repeatedly pledged at summit sessions to eschew new protectionist measures even to roll back devices that interfere with free and open trade.

Back home, however, the political pressures for protection have mounted as a consequence of recession, and protectionist measures have multiplied. The best that can be claimed is protectionist pressures might been even worse in the wake of the 1980-82 recession, without the pledges made at the summits. President Ronald Reagan's game plan for Bonn is to pledge seriously to reduce the scandalous American budget deficit; there is even a new willingness, as evidence grows of a stalling-out of recovery, to admit that a smaller deficit is needed to lower interest rates and make American goods more competitive in world markets. But Mr. Reagan can only pledge an effort at budget control: He still must make a political deal with congressional Democrats to get a deficit-reduction package.

Along with the OECD and IMF bureaucrats, the Reagan administration believes that critical changes must be made in Europe to boost economic growth and to lower high levels of unemployment.

In dramatic terms, a recent IMF record unemployment in Europe, real report showed that for Europe as a whole, the jobless rate this year will approach 11.5 percent, or several percentage points above the level before the 1980-82 recession began. That is nine points higher than in Japan, and four points above the level projected for the United States.

One of the most disturbing economic developments of the past de-cade has been the worsening situation in European labor markets, both relative to their previous performance, and to conditions in the United States," the IMF report stated. There is little mystery why this is happening: Strong labor unions, wage indexation and national mini-mum wages have helped price Euro-pean labor out of the market. Despite rope than in America and Japan for wages in the past two years have risen wages in the past two years have risen more than 2 percent annually. On the other hand, U.S. wages and those in Japan have responded to the reality of recession, boosting productivity. But political leaders in Europe, while recognizing the problem, have found it difficult to produce more than temporary reforms. Unemployment is likely to be a protracted problem for European nations.

lem for European nations.

Beyond that, Europe has been slower than the United States or Japan to accept the emergence of new high-technology processes, which force the displacement of some old-line industries. Europe's partners will press for faster action on this front. There is also less enthusiasm in Eu-abandoning protectionism in favor of a new global trade round. Finally, there is the thorny question of access to Japan's markets. Experience has shown that although the top Japanese political leadership is willing the Japanese economy it-self is slow to adapt to imports. Moreover, neither European nor American exporters - with some exceptions - have proved to be in the same league with the Japanese as in-novative marketing men.

Listening

To Seoul's

Opposition

By Edward W. Poitras

SEOUL — President Chun Doo Hwan of South Korea visited the White House last week in what was described as a cordial meeting that fully reaffirmed the security ties between the two countries. In fact, it is unlikely that these talks penetrated below the surface or recognized the need for serious readjustments in U.S. policy toward South Korea. The legislative elections held in South Korea in February highlighted this need. The campaign allowed a more open political discussion than any in memory. In stumping sessions in which all parties shared the same rostrum, opposition speakers reached out to an enthusiastic electorate, out to an enthusiastic electorate, drawing support for the newly formed opposition group, the New Korea Democratic Party. The ruling Democratic Justice Party met an outpouring of dissatisfaction.

While revealing unhappiness with the Chun government, the election also was a great affirmation of the democratic process. The people showed a determination to make voting work, and the election gave the country a moral boost.

The Chun government's response has been disturbing however. It claims it is seeking dialogue and reconciliation, but its new appointments have increased military influence in the cabinet and extended the degree to which Mr. Chun's staff and secret police are involved in political affairs.

South Korea remains a police state. Seoul abounds with uniformed and plainciothes police. Strong-arm police tactics are used routinely against protesting students and workers. Strict controls have reduced the media to a government-propa-ganda tool. State control of educa-

Student and labor protests continue.

Anti-Americanism, which has a long history in South Korea, is a growing ingredient in these demon-strations. South Koreans remember

Trade Must Take Priority at Summit

By Jonathan Power

ONDON - Protection if it worsens a disease is a contradiction in terms. Yet, although this must be any doctor's diagnosis of what has happened to the world's trading system over the last five years with the growth of trade barriers. Western governments are still refusing to look the evidence squarely in the face.

The object of protection — to improve the well-being of a beleaguered body, in this case depressed economies the still the still the still the barrieried.

- has clearly not been satisfied. Will the Big Seven have the courage to do something about it in Boan?

At the IMF-World Bank meeting in Washington two weeks ago it was decided to open world trade liberalization negotiations in 1986. The exact date will probably be fixed during the Bonn meeting. More important than the date, however, is the mandate.

Outle how had the situation has become is not widely poreciated. Discrimination, to use a word more accurate than protectionism, is so rife that it now requires 35 documents and 360 copies to execute the average transac-tion in international trade. A Finnish study of a not extreme case found that the documentation costs amounted to as much as 5.7 percent of the total value of Finnish imports. This is a big slice of profit margins and for many companies, a deterrent to trading.

In 1980 only 20 percent of manufactured goods consumed in the United States and the European Community were subject to protectionism. Three years later, the igure had increased to 30 percent.

Protectionism is usually justified by Western politi-cians because it helps relatively poor people in declining industrial areas. Superficially this is convincing. The reality is less so. A recent study of the British clothing industry found that clothing prices are 20 percent higher than they would be without trade restrictions. In low quality items, such as jeans, prices are as much as 50 percent higher and the price of children's wear is raised by 100 percent. A Canadian study found that protectionism costs lower income households four times as much as it costs wealthier families. More poor people are hurt by higher prices than are helped by protected jobs.

One of the jibes against the aid lobby is that foreign aid is often a tax on poor people in rich countries transferred to the rich in the poor countries. The jibe could more appropriately be leveled in the trade arena. While the poor in the richer countries pay the penalty of higher prices, the beneficiaries are often those companies that are already established in the exporting countries. While newcomers find it difficult to enter a restricted market, the old-timers can put up their prices.

As for the poorer workers in the protected industries.

the benefits are often illusory or insignificant. Even in industries most exposed to international competition, trade flows are usually a fairly minor influence on em-ployment levels. Moreover, protectionism against exports from one country often just encourages other countries which are not restricted to go into the same business. Only in textiles has it been possible to make the argument that trade barriers protect more than 2 or 3 percent of the jobs. Protectionism gives little and takes away a lot. The inability of the Third World countries to realize their potential merely boomerangs into other sectors of the world economy. A new study by the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development argues that "had the developing countries been able to achieve in the 1980s even half the annual average growth rate in export earnings they recorded in the 1970s the 1982 debt service ratio would have been 4 percentage points lower." The OECD concludes that the "self-inflicted effects of the protective measures" have cost the industrialized countries 3.3 percent of their gross domestic product.

The more uncertain the world's economic climate the more pressure there is to impose increased restrictions. But this is taking us all nowhere. The world economy, thanks to Man's innovative capacity, has enormous unrealized potential both in the West and in the Third World. Open trade is the best way of maximizing each country's contribution. Uncorking international trade rather than bottling it up should be the priority in Bonn.

The German Resisters Should Be Honored, Too

WASHINGTON - When it W comes to recognizing Germans who lived during the Nazi era, there is one group that has every right to be honored. It was made up of men and women, young and old, Christians and unbelievers, who never yielded to Hitlerian blandishments, who in countless instances suffered unspeakably and died for those beliefs.

To anyone familiar with the history of the Nazi years — sadly, that does not seem to include many around the White House these days — the history of the German resis-tance is a well-known subject. For years, in the 1930s and early 1940s, Hitler and company liked to make the world believe that the German people were solidly behind them. We have long known better. The German opposition to Hitler began in the days following his takeover on Jan. 30, 1933, and continued until his "Thousand Year Reich" ended 12 years and four months later. Its politics were right and left and center. Its climactic effort — the famous assassination attempt of July 20, 1944 — proved unsuccessful, but the incidence of opposition to Hitler and National Socialism, the acts of courage and dissidence were legion.

Such attitudes and deeds were duly noted by the American Embassy in Berlin as late as the autumn of 1941. As one ranking U.S. diplomat reported to the State Department on Oct. 14, 1941 (in a telegram not published in full until 1982): "The revival of the Jewish question by the required wearing of the Star of David has met with almost universal disapproval by the people of Berlin and in some cases with astonishing manifestations of sympathy with the Jews in public." For years, the Communists — Soviet and East German — liked to claim the German resistance to Hitler as tance was nothing of the kind. There were Social Democrats and labor leaders, such as Fritz Leber. There were aristocrats and army officers, such as Claus Count Schenk von Stauffenberg, who planted the bomb in Hitler's headquarters in 1944, and others such as Lieutenant General Ludwig Beck and Helmuth James Count von Moltke, whom George F.

In Germany's years of shame, the resistance set an example of courage and humanity.

Kennan described later in his memoirs as "the greatest person, morally ... that I met on either side of the battle lines."

There were ranking government officials, such as Carl Goerdeler, the former lord mayor of Leipzig, Johan-nes Popitz, the Prussian secretary of the treasury, and Admiral Wilhelm Canaris. There were noted theolo-gians, such as Dietrich Bonhoeffer, and diplomats, such as Adam von Trott zu Solz and Ulrich von Hassell, and leading historians, such as Ger-hard Ritter, whose deeply moving let-ters from his Berlin prison in 1944-45 have recently been published by the West German Bundesarchiv. Before and after July 1944, the prisons and camps held many such people. The executioner claimed thousands more. Of course, the resisters remained too few. And they were often uncertain and perhaps inevitably divided over tactics and strategy. Tragically.

they were unable to confront the Jew-their own. The record shows the resisish situation head-on.

The democracies did not help. Apprised of the opposition's existence and plans for a possible coup against Hitler in the summer of 1938, before Munich, the British government de-liberately turned its head. President Roosevelt reacted similarly.
Some of the resisters survive. One of the most notable, the West German diplomat Hans Heinrich Herwarth von Bittenfeld, visited the United States — including my classroom in Houston - in October, 1983. It was an unforgettable event.

As a young diplomat in the Nazi embassy in Moscow in early 1939, von Herwarth risked his life by disclosing to the late Charles E. Bohlen, himself then a young Foreign Service officer at the U.S. Embassy, the be-ginnings and unfolding of the supersecret diplomatic negotiations lead-ing to the Nazi-Soviet pact in August, 1939. These revelations reached President Roosevelt and the Department of State in a matter of hours.

in Germany's years of unspeakable shame, the resistance set an example of courage and humanity at its best. In the country's darkest night, they set a standard of honor and decency. And they persisted under unimaginable circumstances.

As Carl Goerdeler, executed on Feb. 2, 1945, put in a secret letter to German generals in 1943: "It is a great mistake to assume that the moral force of the German people is ex-hansted; the fact is that it has been deliberately weakened. The only hope of salvation is to sweep away the secrecy and terror, to restore justice and decent government and so to pave the way for a great moral reviv-al. We must not be shaken in our belief that the German people will want justice, honesty and truthfulness in the future, as in the past."

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Turkish Rule in Cyprus Further to my letter of March 19,

1985, I wish to stress these points: In connection with a reference in your recent Special Report on Cyprus (Feb. 25), it should be remembered that property has been seized from Greek Cypriot refugees evicted by the Turkish army and that the so-called government in Turkish-occupied Cyprus has been declared illegal and condemned by the United Na-tions and the international community at large. The European Community decided recently, through its Commission, that the exports from Cyprus to the members of the EC should be accompanied by documentation of the Cyprus government.

Regarding the Jan. 17 meeting in New York between President Spyros Kyprianon and the Turkish Cypriot leader, Rauf Denktash, I wish to stress the goodwill of the government of Cyprus to cooperate with the United Nations secretary-general, and I only hope that the Turkish side will not continue to create barriers to the possibility of success of a new high-level meeting.

Taking into account that the last intercommunal incident occurred in 1967, it should be noted that the policy of Turkey since 1954 has been one of division and creation of faits accomplis within the separatist philosophy of Ankara. The evidence is abundant: rejection in 1963 of a revision of the Constitution; bombardment by the Turkish air force of Cyp-riot villages in 1964; withdrawal from the government; creation of enclaves; invasion and occupation by Turkey since 1974 of 37 percent of the Cyprus territory; recognition by Turkey of a separate state in the occupied area, and so forth.

The future of the people of Cyprus as a whole lies in a federation towards which the government of Cyprus is actively committed. Such a federa-tion of an independent, nonaligned. territorially integral Cyprus would offer Greek Cypriots and Turkish Cypriots alike the opportunity to live in prosperity and share in the pro-ligress of a strong, united Republic.

Volcano Watchers Try to Probe Earth's Secrets

By Walter Sullivan

New York Times Service
New York — Early one day last month, right on schedule, lava began spurting from a young volcanie cone known as Pu'u O on the east rift zone of Hawaii's Kilanea volcano. The 14-hour eruption. which sent fountains of fiery lava 1,000 feet (300 meters) into the air, was the 32d from that site since a series of periodic eruptions began there in January 1983.

Probably no volcano on Earth crupts so often, and probably no other is subjected to such intense observation. Among other find-ings, the monitoring has showed that, with surprising uniformity, it gradually swells before each of its eruptions, then deflates abruptly as lava pours from the outlet.

Kilauea is a laboratory for chies to the behavior of volcanoes worldwide, and a focal point of efforts to understand the volcanic process that built the Hawaiian Islands and which is forming a new submarine member of the chain, Loihi Seamount, to the southeast

The islands are the offspring of a rising fountain of molten rock deep beneath the Pacific Ocean floor. For a large part of the past 100 million years, this fountain has erupted periodically onto the surface and, because the Pacific floor has been moving while the plume remained stationary, it has produced a long string of islands.

They, or their sunken remnants, reach from the currently active volcanoes on the Big Island of Hawaii to the northeast corner of the Pacific. But despite years of monitoring of Hawaiian eruptions, the nature of the plume and others like it within the Earth's mantle - the inner area above the central core - re-

Gene Promoting Scrapies Is Isolated

LOS ANGELES (NYT) — A gene that seems to promote scrapies, which produces a tangle of protein rods and filaments in the brains of animals, has been isolated, closed and ecquenced, opening the way for research into what causes this and other degenerative brain diseases. The study, reported in the scientific journal Cell, has given impetts to a theory that a radically different kind of infectious agent, called a prion, may cause the infectious. Most infectious agents insert their own genetic material, or DNA, into a host cell. The infectious DNA then reproduces itself and sends its own products, which are proteins, into the host. Prions seem to be small proteins that should not have the ability, like gene-carrying viruses, to reproduce themselves. But in 1982. Dr. Prasiner found prions in the cells of animals with scrapies and has since advanced the theory that prions alone might cause the infection.

Snoring Tied to High Blood Pressure

LONDON (UPI) — Researchers of the University of Helsinki report that snoring is often associated with high blood pressure and angina

The team's survey of 3,847 men and 3,664 women, reported in The Lancet, said the statistical connection between high blood pressure and snoring was significant in both sexes. The link between snoring and angina pectoris, piercing arterial chest pain, was significant only in men.

The survey found that 9 percent of the men and 3.6 percent of the women were habitual sporers. Snoring increased slightly with age among men but to a more significant extent among women. It also appeared to be related to body mass - about twice as many heavy people who

Such eruptions have occurred every few weeks with striking regular-ity, the previous one March 13. Before each eruption the entire volcano inflates, aftering the tilt of the land as far away as the observatory perched on the rim of the main Kilauea Crater, 14 miles away. The observatory's tilt meters record the slow inflation before each emption, followed by an abrupt deflation. Still uncertain is how far down such plumes or "hot spots" originate, why they exist, where they exist and why they seem to generate great blobs of magma rather than a steady flow.

As a result of a wide range of measurements, however, much has been learned regarding the volcanoes themselves. On good flying days, until the current eruption, John P. Hofmann took off by helicopter to land at sites along Kilauea's east rift zone, reloading a timelapse camera aimed at the ever-steaming cone of Pu'u O and conducting surveys to watch for spreading of the rift.

On the summit, he mounts his electronic measuring device and aims its laser pulses at a succession of reflectors in various directions on both sides of the rift. Their round-trip travel times are auto-matically recorded with sufficient precision to detect any widening or other deformation of the rift zone.

Sockets for each leg of the measuring device's tripod are cemented into the lava so that on each return the tripod can be readily mounted in the same location. Once reflected laser pulses are detected, the instrument runs automatically, emitting squeaks, peeps and whis-tles that are decoded by computers, as it takes and compares about 70

It has been found that, as with the tilt observations, the rift expands until an eruption occurs and then contracts.

Clustering of shallow earth-quakes beneath the east rift zone and the coast suggest to Dr. Koyanagi that the repeated invasions of lava are gradually pushing that six-mile-wide rim of the island toward the sea, motion in the other direction being blocked by the

Prices of N.Y. Stocks Decline NEW YORK — Prices were lower late Wednesday on the New York Stock Exchange, and some analysts were predicting a less-than ebullient market for the short term. The Dow Jones industrial average was off 8.06 to 1,250 an hour before the close. Declines led advances by a 3-2 ratio. Volume amounted to about 81.5 million shares, down from 93.3 million traded in the like period Tuesday.

Prices were lower in active trading of American Stock Exchange issues.

The market's attempt - and failure gain significantly last week has thrown cold water on stocks, said Chester Pado, of A.C. Securities, Los Angele

"When that type of failure occurs, you cannot few weeks."

He said the market will continue to test the 1,240-to-1,250 range for several weeks.

The immediate picture does not look good, he said, adding that "the downside risk is fairly ninimal" long-term.

And the potential for an upward swing is substantial, he said.

The market is still confined to its trading range, said Joseph Broder, of Stuart, Coleman, who believes it will break out of that range on 1.63e 5.8

Because of a combination of current interest rate levels and low inflation, "the odds still favor the bull," he said.

The disappointing economic reports from the government reflect the first quarter, and many economists have predicted improvement in the second half, he said.

Arco was near the top of the actives, and higher. In other oil stocks, Unocal, Exxon, Phillips and Texaco were all fractionally higher.

Philip Morris, also active, was lower. Trans World Airlines was off a bit. Among technologies, IBM and Digital Equipment were slightly lower. Cray Research, Control Data, Burroughs and Honeywell were up a bit.

General Motors and Ford were slightly low

General Dynamics was up sharply.

American Can was higher after reporting first-quarter net of $1.20 a share, up from $1.01 re in the year-earlier quarter.

And General Foods, after announcing fourth-quarter operating net of $2.53 a share. up from $2.26 a share in the year-earlier quarter, was off % to 62%. It said its first-quarter net, however, would likely be below $2.17 a share

On the Amex, active issues included BAT Industries, Dome Petroleum and Instrument System Corp.

A block of 2.64 million shares of BAT crossed at 3%. Instrument Systems was unchanged at 1%. Horn & Hardart was up % to 11%. On the Big Board, defense issues were gaining, with United Technologies and Lockheed

WALL STREET WATCH

Are the Market Doldrums A Calm Before the Storm?

By EDWARD ROHRBACH

International Herold Tribune ARIS — Remember when Wall Street used to be fun?

Stocks would snar, then nose-dive, only to rise again—generally keeping investors on the edges of their rollercoaster seats. You got your money's worth, even if there was precious little of it left after all the wild swings.

Until Monday of this week when the Dow dropped 15 points, the average had chumed through 27 straight trading sessions without moving at least 1 percent up or down from the previous day's close.

It was the market's most lackluster performance in five years. It came close to out-yawning the modern record (going back to 1970) when stocks slept 36 ses-has accurately forecast the lack of follow-through that has characterized Wall Street's short-but-sweet advances over the last year and a half. "If there is any real move in stocks about to take place now," he added, "we don't see any signs of it."

He pointed to the firm's computer profile of daily activity which shows that even on relatively strong days since March 20, with the Dow moving 5 to 10 points bloc trading of 10,000 shares or more by big institutional investors has been weak. Even in Monday's sharp decline, he said that the reason was not as much aggressive selling as it was lack of buyers. "The institutions are just recycling their money, that is, selling stock A to buy stock B," he added. "If you are going to have a real expansion in this market, you'll see evidence that new money is What stocks investors are purchasing also reflects the marker's malaise, Mr. Birinyi noted: They're buying utilities, banks and insurance issues and moving out of technology.

However, John Mendelson, head of Dean Witter Reynolds Inc.'s market analysis group, said he believes that Wall Street is about to shake itself out of the doldrums. "A move is imminent," he said, "you're just about looking at it here."

E observed that while the Dow has continued to stagnate; the New York Composite and Standard & Poor's 500 index hit all-time highs last Thursday, while the number of weekly new highs among stocks on the New York exchange was the higgest in 10 weeks.
"This judicates gathering strength," he said. "And I believe we'll come out of this period of duliness on the upside."

Mr. Mendelson, who has predicted several major market declines and advances in recent years, pointed out that so far in 1985, the broad market has gone up twice the Dow's 5.52 percent usin. He cited the New York Composite, up 9.57 this year, and the 5,000 stock Wilshire index, up 10.29 percent. As a contrarian, the current sentiment he sees prevailing or Wall Street of "extraordinary caution" is also bullish. With the board averages so high and other pluses such as low inflation, he said, "You'd think investors would be fairly optimistic."

Byron R. Wien, the new U.S. investment strategist at Morgan Stanley & Co., also thinks something good is brewing for stocks throng their thirent sow boil. He quoted Manuel Bennez, the famous Spanish builfighter called El Cordobes, about uninspired

U.K. Sets Price for BAe Stock

Level Is Higher Than Expected

Bob Hagerry
International Herald Tribum
LONDON — The government nnounced Wednesday a higher than expected price for its 48-per-cent shareholding in British Acrospace PLC.

At 375 pence ($4.58) a share, the offer price was just 5 percent below Tresday's closing price of 395 pence on the London Stock Exchange. On Wednesday, BAchange eliment 5 pence to close at shares slipped 5 pence to close at 390, down 42 pence from the high reached last month. Some investment analysts had expected a dis-count of around 10 percent to the market price.

"It's very keenly priced," said Wyn Ellis, an analyst at the Lon-don stockbrokerage of James Capel & Co. He warned that a sudden market downturn could easily send BAe shares below the offer price. Because the issue already is underwritten by five British merchant banks, the government is guaranteed its proceeds of about £360 million ($442.8 million). But a plunge in the market price would leave underwriters and investors with losses on the transaction and sour the market's mood shead of further planned sales of stateowned companies, notably British Airways PLC.

The pricing appeared to reflect a desire to avoid charges that the government was selling state-owned assets too cheaply. Such charges arose after the government sold half of the shares in British Telecommunications PLC last November. British Telecom shares now are trading at about 70 percent above the government's sale price. The BAe sale, analysts say, is extremely unlikely to become a similar bonanza for investors. Applications for the BAe shares are due by 10 A.M. on May 10. Buyers will be required to pay 200 pence a share when they apply and 175 peace on Sept. 10. Along with the government's shares, the offering includes 50 mil-tion new shares being sold by BAe to increase its reserves.

The leading underwriters to the issue, Kleinwort, Benson Ltd. and Lazard Brothers & Co., said certain agreed to buy as much as 100 percent of the shares on offer. These "priority applicants" have at least 55 percent of the shares.

profits of about £150 million this period. ear. He called the shares undervaued at the current price.

Despite his reservations on the offer price, Capel's Mr. Ellis said we think the prospects for the cyoptions. The most heavily traded company on a longer-term view are quite good."

Britain's Bingo Clubs: P, as in Profit Big Operators See an Even Rosier Future in the Cards

By Bob Hagerty
stemational Herald Tribuou

LONDON -- "Here!" Another winner at the Top Rank bingo club claims a small cash prize, and once again the winner is not Dot Hajba, a grandmother draped in sky-blue polyester. "I'm going to change me pen," she mutters to her husband, Frank, who silently cradles a bottle of light ale. At the next table, a woman resumes her knitting while awaiting the

For several million Brisons like the Hajbas, bingo is a relatively cheap evening's diversion. For a handful of large companies, it is a depressed but still very profitable business, producing estimated industrywide revenue of £400 million ($492 million) a year and pretax profit margins of around 20 percent. Later this year, the companies hope to make the game more tempting by introducing much bigger cash prizes.

In most countries, bingo is a nonprofit game run for charities. But British law allows operators to carn a profit from such items as admission fees, food, drinks and low-stakes slot machines, while paying out in prizes all the cash staked on bingo. The players are mostly poor, over 40 and female. Many, according to a survey by Trinity and All Saints' College, would rather be dining out or dancing, but their husbands reject such ideas.

So bingo wins by default. For one thing, social convention holds that there are two places where a woman can go alone: church and bingo.

For another, bingo is neither competitive nor stressful. Numbers are called out at random, and

In U.S. Economy rates to drop in an effort to revive the economy's health.

By Tom Redburn Los Angeles Times Service WASHINGTON - In another indication of economic weakness the U.S. government has reported that its main economic barometer

fell 0.2 percent in March. The drop disclosed Tuesday by the Commerce Department in the index of leading indicators — to-gether with another large merchan-dise trade deficit in March — disappointed administration officials.

The level of the index "has not increased during the last 12 months and is likely to remain sluggish until the dollar falls," Commerce Secretary Malcohn Baldrige said. "The economy probably will strengthen during the current quarter, but domestic production gains will be limited by higher imports and flat At the same time, the Department of Commerce reported that factory orders fell in March by 0.9 percent, the second straight month-ly decline and the eighth drop in factory orders over the past 12

"Business is just not very confident about the expansion at this point," said Robert Gough, an economist at Data Resources Inc. in Lexington, Massachusens, "I don't think the decline in the overall index should be over-interpreted, but there are some real indicators of weakness" in the economy,

Along with the decline in the leading indicators for March, the Department of Commerce also revised downward the gains posted in the previous two months; dropping the February increase from 0.7 percent to 0.5 percent and the January one from 1.5 percent to 1.3 percent.
Like Mr. Baldrige, many economists have placed much of the blame for the economic slowdown on the continuing strength of the U.S. dollar, which makes it more difficult for American business to compete against foreigners. Despite a modest decline in the dollar's value over the past few months, the nation had an $11 billion foreign trade deficit in March, only a slight improvement from the $11.4 billion deficit in February, the government announced Tuesday.

The trade deficit was a record $123.3 billion in 1984 and so far this year has reached $32.8 billion, slightly ahead of last year's pace. The continuing signs of economic weakness, which began last sum-recently reported that economic growth in the first quarter, adjusted for inflation, was just 1.3 percent far less than the 4 percent growth the Reagan administration is counting on to help stabilize the budget deficit and prevent unemployment from rising.

In the report on leading indicators, seven of the 10 available statistics were down. Only the average workweek, building permits and initial claims for unemployment insurance showed gains.

The negative influences on the March index, in order of importance, were from net business formations, orders for plant and equipment new orders for consumer goods and materials, performance of vendors, sensitive ma als prices, stock values and the money supply.

Construction Spending Up

Overall construction spending rose 0.1 percent in March as private nonresidential building slipped enough to temper a 1.3-percent gain in residential construction, the U.S. government reported Wednes-day, according to The Associated Press.

By contrast, construction spend-ing had risen 2.3 percent in Febru-ary and 2.9 percent in January.

Dollar Stronger; Gold Price Down

LONDON — Rising interest rates in the United States pushed the dollar higher Wednesday in thin, volatile trading. The price of gold fell.

Currency dealers in London said the dollar was being underpinned by market sentiment that there was little chance of U.S. interest rates moving lower. The interest rate on overnight dollar deposits in Europe increased 4 of a percentage point to 84 percent. Trading volume was low because most European markets were closed for May Day.

252.475 Japanese yen, up from 251.425 yen Tuesday. Later, in London, the dollar was quoted at 252.90 yen. The British pound fell to $1.223, compared with $1.243 late Tuesday. Gold was quoted in London at a late bid price of $311.50, down from $321.00 late Tuesday.

The highly automated plant, the California oil company, covering about 2.3 million square

A federal judge in Cal feet (about 640,000 square meters), is to produce a new midsize car code-named the GM-10 model. Except for the Saturn project, GM's highly publicized effort to build a subcompact cost competitive with Japanese models, the $7-billion GM-10 project is likely to be the company's most important new-product program in the 1980s.

Plans call for the front-wheeldrive GM-10 to replace both the drive CiM-10 to replace both the front-drive A-body intermediates and the older, rear-drive G-bodies. Besides building the Kansas City plant, to produce up to 270,000 cars per year, GM plans to retool as many as four assembly plants in the United States and one in Canada for GM 10 production in the late. for GM-10 production in the late 1980s, according to reports.

CBS Takeover Has Makings of Television Drama

By Donald M. Rothberg

The Associated Press
WASHINGTON — The way Ted Torner tells the story, when CBS executives talked to him in 1981 about buying his Turner Broadcasting System, he replied, Why don't wait a year and then I'll buy you."

It took four years for Mr. Turner to get around to trying, and it still seems unlikely he will succeed, but now he is in the marketplace with a multibillion-dollar offer to buy control of the top-rated network.

The CBS board of directors responded quickly to the offer from the Atlanta-based broadcaster, calling it "financially imprudent."

> The founder of CBS, William S. Paley, speaking out for the first time on the takeover bids, said Tuesday that any major change at CBS would be "a tragedy." The 83-year-old former chairman said he supports present management.

So far, the apparent winners are the long-term holders of large blocks of CBS stock which has risen about $30 a share since the takeover talk began early this year.

They're all waiting for CBS to do something to pay them off," Mr At greed motivation here."

For some players, the motive is political, a desire to humble what Mr. Helms calls the "elite media," a group the conservative senator says group the conservative senator says

There's several months before with the ideals and goals of the American people."

Those sentiments were echoed last year by Mr. Turner when he told a conservative group that "these networks need to be gotten into the hands of people who care about this country,"
Allies of Mr. Helms in North Carolina formed Fairness In Media and amounced a campaign to get conservatives to buy CBS stock in an effort to combat what the group called the network's "liberal bias." After Mr. Turner made his bid, organizers of Fairness in Media said they would urge conservatives to back him.

Many on Wall Street felt the Helms-organized effort was doomed from the start. They saw no chance an ideological campaign could raise the $4 billion it might take to pull off a hostile takeover. "I don't think there's any way on God's green earth they're going to be able to form any sort of coalition with cash and march in there and take over CBS," said Miss Cook.

goal was to try to scare the media mto being a little more even-hand-ed from what they consider to be a liberal bias, they've probably accomplished that already.

When the American Society of Newspaper Editors met in Washington in April, its members were told of a poll by MORI Research Inc. of Minneapolis that said threefourths of adults expressed doubts about the credibility of newspapers and television and one-lifth deeply distrust the media.

The immediate issue for CBS was how many people were ready to put their trust in the complex offer put forth by Mr. Turner.

In the financial community, he has a reputation as a businessman who bought a failing Atlanta televi-sion station for $2.5 million and in 15 years built it into a broadcast organization with assets of more than $275 million. But CBS is a multibillion dollar operation. In 1984, Turner Broadcasting had earnings of $10 million on revenue of $281.7 million, CBS

Even in a scenario that includes effective import controls and favorable exchange rates, the so-called integrated steel mills that mix a broad range of production and manufacturing functions would continue to close as produccrs strive to become more efficient. said the 158-page report of a panel of steel industry experts.

The report, prepared under the auspices of the National Academy of Engineering and released Tuesday, said if the steel industry is to

Japan Auto Exports Rose 16.8% in 1984

The Associated Press TOKYO — Japan shipped 2.62 million automobiles to the United States diring fiscal year 1984, an increase of 16.8 percent over the previous year, a Japanese auto association said Wednesday.

Total automobile exports for that year were 6.13 million, an in-crease of 7.7 percent from 1983 and the highest figure since the world's largest automaker began its "vol-untary restraint" on U.S. exports in 1981, the Japan Automobile Manufacturers Association said.

shake off its financial woes, "the most efficient operations must be saved, clearly inefficient operations should be closed, and mixed facilipes must be encouraged to modernize and restructure themselves."

But some factors necessary for revitalization are beyond the industry's control, the report said. They include the strength of the U.S. dollar and effective domestic tradelaw enforcement and legislation.

Problems with imports, it said, are likely to get worse as develop-ing countries add new capacity. The study mentioned, but did not evaluate, President Ronald Reagan's program, initiated last year, of seeking voluntary restraint agreements with major exporters to reduce the foreign share of the U.S. steel market from 25 percent to

The difficulty in competing with foreign steelmakers stems not from a lack of technical knowledge, but from subsidization of foreign producers by their governments and a lack of capital by American firms to make use of known technology, the report said. James Collins, executive vice president of the American Iron and Steel Institute, agreed with the study's conclusion that the industry must "turn out more steel with less people." But he said the report's figures appeared "dated." "It doesn't talk about the last couple of years and cost reduction. Our productivity has gone up sharply in that time." Mr. Collins Prime Minister Mary Euge-nia Charles of Dominica said that small island nations such as hers needed extra aid to build up their infrastructure so they can take advantage of the po-tential of the CBI to increase investment in the region. She called lumping the small na-tions in the same program with larger mainland countries such as El Salvador, Costa Rica and Guatemala "a great disservice to the island."

Miss Charles spoke at a luncheon celebrating the first year of the CBL, the Reagan administration program that started Jan. 1, 1984, to improve eco-nomic conditions in the Caribbean Besin through private-sector trade and investment as well as government aid.

Reagan administration offi-cials said Monday that the pro-gram has resulted in increased investment in the region, citing 250 projects that created 27,500 cash to fuel an advance, But if the market is about to take off because of lower rates, this would not be the first time it has been a little aluggish out of the starting gate," Mr. Wien said. "In 1982, long Treasury rates began to drop at the end of June, and the stock market did not begin its unprecedented buying panic until mid-Angust."

Similarly, he added, long rates peaked in May 1984, eight weeks before the early-Angust rally of last year, although he noted that the bond market tested its low in June.

"So perhaps we are just being impatient, and any time now the buil will begin to charge again," Mr. Wien, who takes the view that investors must be as selective with large stocks as with small issues, histed these three blue chips as his strongest recommendations: American Express, Gillette and Royal Dutch Petroleum.

wife. One bingo operator attending a convention in London privately "I hate the bloody game," confided a Weishman who runs three bingo halls but dreams of opening a roller-skating rink instead.

However unloved, the game persists. The initial boom came in the late 1950s and early 1960s. As television out attendance at movies, many theater owners converted their buildings to bingo clubs. Despite restrictions legislated in 1968, the business grew rapidly, attracting such major companies as Bass PLC, Granada Group PLC, Ladbroke Group PLC, Rank Organisa-tion PLC and Grand Metropolitan PLC, as well as hundreds of smail operators. The game hit a peak in the late 1970s when 1,780 clubs sees open. Since, the number has dropped to around 1,200 as operators concenhalls seating 2,000 or more. Lad-broke estimates that the number of people who play regularly has fall-en to 3.5 million from 5.5 million.

That decline partly reflects Britain's uneven economic recovery which has left unemployment at 13 percent and barely touched many northern industrial areas. At the same time, the government has en-couraged people who are working to buy their own houses. So they spend more money and time fixing up their homes.

Fear of crime and the decline of bus services also keep people at home in the evening, bingo opera-tors say. Fashions are changing too: While older women settled for bingo, younger ones are more de-manding.

that they are overly restricted by Britain's gaming regulations. Except when it first opens, a bingo hall is not allowed to advertise using the word "bingo," Players must be at least 18 years old. And, lest anyone make a hasty decision, first-time players at any club must sign a membership form and wait 24 hours before gaining admission.

The rules also effectively limit prizes to a maximum of £3,000 on any one game, and most games are much smaller. But bingo operators expect parliamentary approval this summer for a "national" game link-ing hundreds of clubs by computer and paying a top prize of £50,000.

da. It plans to increase the number of its clubs from 40 to 50 in the next

Still, expectations are subdued "There's not going to be a major rebound," said Barry Anderson, managing director of Mecca Social Clubs, a unit of Grand Met. To attract a wider audience some bingo operators are putting more emphasis on food and drink and occasionally offering cabaret acts to fill in between bingo sessions. Granada, for instance, recently brought in such nostalgia acts as the Drifters and the Platters. Mecca and others offer overseas vacations as prizes.

Granada may even introduce was arrest the game's decline and perhaps provide a modest upturn.
"We think we're hitting the bottom," said Charles Stringer, who

THE CALL: An American Missionary in China

By John Hersey. 701 pp. $19.95. Alfred A. Knopf, 201 East 40th Street, New York, N. Y. 10022.

Reviewed by Eva Hoffman

T HAS been John Hersey's virtue as a teach er and a public figure — and sometimes his weakness as a novelist — that, against all odds and the grain of the times, he has sustained the idea of writing as a moral mission. Now, in a work that seems intended as a summa of his preoccupations and concerns, he has chosen to look at the missionary impulse itself, through the history of the Protestant evangelical movement in China in the first half of this century. It is a vastly ambitious, impressively crudite, and unfortunately flawed undertaking.

Hersey's credentials for tackling the subject are impeccable. A son of American missionaries in China, he has a large and intimate knowledge of the American side of the adventure and of the figures and scenes within the infinitely complicated Chinese tapestry. Through diary entries, letters and snippets of historical docu-ments, this novel traces the life and spiritual development of David Treadup, a not untypi-cal "China hand," based on several actual Treadup's biography is recounted from his beginnings as the son of puritanical Yankee farmers through his years as a student given to bouts of depression and "badness" and his sudden, imburdening conversion to Christian-ity. That episode is followed by his involvement with the YMCA - one of the main organs of missionary efforts at the time - and his assignment to China, with the goal of nothing less than the "The Evangelization of the World in This Generation."

Hersey is well aware of the comedy and the misunderstandings involved in grafting Ameri-can and Christian presumptions onto the con-voluted subtleties of Chinese culture, but be treats his perennially well-intentioned hero with considerable sympathy. Treadup gains a nearly heroic stature, coming to represent the best qualities of the American character, the best side of innocence.

Treadup quickly realizes that Christian doctrine may not be the most charitable substance to administer to people suffering from poverty and hunger, and begins his search for the social gospel that might rectify some of China's ills. Initially, he tries to work "from the top down." by educating the Chinese literati, but gradually he begins to understand that if he wants to have any impact he must try to reach the masses more directly.

Hersey observes that many of the collective work methods introduced by the missionaries were later taken up by the Communists. But although Treadup's progress involves a growing populism, his attraction to Communism is short-lived, and the new faith — after a series of dramatically drawn encounters — eventually terrifies him by its potential for fanaticism Hersey's accounts of lesser-known episodessuch as the recruitment of a coolie labor corps by the Allies during World War I or the begin-nings of vast literacy campaigns based on a simplified version of the Chinese alphabet can; be fascinating. But he tries to tell too much. The amount of sheer information packed is so overwhelming that is becomes difficult to focus on the significance of a state of the significance of the signific on the significance of any one event or issue.

N the diagramed deal, the splinter showing a diamond fit, slam interest and at most one beart. When South cooperated with a cue-bid of four hearts, North made a cue-bid in spades and then settled in six diamonds.

The slam hinged on locating the trump queen, and the bid-ding offered a clue: West's take-out double suggested shortness in diamonds.

South ducked the opening club lead, a slightly risky procedure, and won the continuation with the ace. He cashed the diamond ace, finding good news and bad news: The queen was bad. If the trumps were drawn by routine finessing, 12-tricks would not be available. The diamond ten was finessed, the heart ace was cashed and a heart was ruffed. Three spade winners were tak-. en, an essential play, and a club was led. South ruffed after East discarded a heart. The remaining heart loser was ruffed, and the K-J of trumps in the closed hand were poised over East's Q-9 at the finish,

WASHINGTON - "Gentle-men. I have been brought in by the president to find out what has gone wrong with his well-oiled public relations machine. Let's start with Nicaragua. Can anyone explain the foul-up with the Nica-raguan refugee kid who gave the president flowers at the dinner in Washington? "We couldn't find a Nicaraguan kid, so we dug up an American one.

The chairman of hard of hearing. so he introduced the kid to the president as a Nicaraguan ref-usee. How did we know the prez would kiss her, and the press would find out she was born Buchwald

"You'll admit the photo opportunity couldn't have come at a worse time. It made it appear the White House staff doesn't do its homework. Which brings me to my next question. Who told the president the pope supported the United States's policy in Nicaragua?"

"You can't lay that one on us. The president got a personal cable from the Vatican wishing him a happy Easter, and thought it was a signal that His Holiness would join our covert operations in Central

"Even if the president thought it, how did you people allow it to get on his cue cards?"

"The president ad-libbed that one on his own. He does it every once in awhile just to keep in practice. If the pope hadn't denied it, no one would have ever known."

"I'll take your word that the president dropped the ball on the pope. Let's get to the little old lady from the Navajo tribe whom the

The Long Training of Amy Madigan

By Megan Rosenfeld

WASHINGTON — Amy Madigan has a voice like industrial-strength sandpaper, and a street urchin's face. At 34, she's been an actress for only five years, but has packed more memorable parts into that short time than some performers do in a career.

She was a "tough little kid turned responsi-ble parent" in "Love Child," her first tilin— and first leading role. In "Streets of Fire," a curious rock 'n' roll "fable" released with a loud thud last summer, she stood out as a hard-bitten street punk. In "Places in the Heart," she played the wistful "Sylvia Plathtype woman," the schoolteacher who had an affair with Sally Field's brother-in-law.

Now, as Glory in "Alamo Bay," she plays her best role yet, a brash small-town woman in Texas who discovers she has principles when faced with a confrontation between Vietnamese immigrants and the locals who resent the newcomers' intrusion into the shrimping trade. Her character, the daughter of a fish wholesaler, is a simple soul whose pleasures run to beer halls, country-western music and an affair with her married high school sweetheart, who happens to be the leader of the locals.

"Glory is just this kind of real person, who has as many problems and is as wishy-washy as any of us, and somehow through it learns something about herself," Madigan said.
"She's a simple character in that sense, which was the appeal to me of her. She doesn't pick all the cotton and stop the river and do all those things -- you know what I mean."

Her skin is not perfect, her figure is lean and she has a cocky walk (in cowboy boots). She talks rapidly, dropping g's with abandon. She looks anything but glamorous in "Alamo Bay," with her hair bleached platinum and crimped to look as if she has had a bad home

"I'm lucky to have hair at this point," she snorted, "It's been burned, fuzzed, dyed, rolled, curled ... But I'd shave my head for the right movie. That just makes it all the

She has had a rather extraordinary run of luck for someone who turned to acting when she was 29. Before that she was a rock singer (she sings on the soundtrack of "Alamo Bay"), with 10 years of working beer joints. starting bands and disbanding them, fighting off unappreciative patrons and learning to take rejection.

"I actually had people pull me offstage by my pants less because I offended them," she said. "They hated me, they hated the music, they hated my singing, they hated everything. Once we were playing a beer bar in Madison, Wisconsin, and a guy looked at me and I was looking at him and he took a pitcher of beer and poured it into the PA system and blew it

But rock 'n' roll is performing, and not an unlikely route to film. It was a good training ground for all the guff, hype and guile of

"I got into a band my first week in college. I met these gnys at a party who were playing in this band, and I lied to them. I said I had sung and played in bands. I lied. So they said, 'Well, great, be in our band.' And I was pretty bad, but I was so undaunted, and I just knew I could do it - which I know sounds egotistical and presumptuous, but you have to have those qualities if you're going to stand up and perform for people.

"But I'm one of those people who literally from a little teeny kid fantasizing in her bedroom putting clothes on her head. I knew what I was going to do. I was in all the school plays and all the piano adjudications, and I played sports — in all the speech contests, it was just very clear to me. A life of performing and standing in front of people — it was christian I'm sure obmoviously obvious to a obvious. I'm sure obmoxiously obvious to a worked very hard." After 10 years of having "put together bands, loaded equipment, borrowed money and driven the vans," as well as singing and playing keyboards, she decided it was time for a change. As a singer, she said, she was a good performer. She had made one record that "aside from my family and about two friends didn't go too far. It's a real Madigan cult favorite."

So she moved to Los Angeles, got a job as a waitress and began studying full time at the Lee Strasberg Institute, the West Coast temple to Method acting. "I just worked every day, all day, and did about 8,000 scenes, and got to work with Mr. Strasberg. It was a really good experience for me. And then I just kind of hit the streets. Auditioned for plays and parts, met my current manager - be introduced me to my agents, and they said, 'Well, there's something about you we like, we'll send you out for something."

"And they sent me out for a television show, a 'Hart to Hart' show. And I got it. And they kind of went 'Hmh!' They sent me on a movie of the week and I got that. So it happened very naturally.

Last year, while filming "Places in the Heart" in Texas, she married her long-time beau, Ed Harris, her co-star in "Alamo Bay." "We'd been living together and talking about getting married, and being in Waxahachie, in that kind of small-town situation, we thought, yeah, it seems like a good time to do

"We got up and had breakfast in this little coffee shop. Then we went over to the justice of the peace with our dog and got married, and then we had to go work that afternoon. So we went back to work and we were kind of giggling and saying "Well, guess what we did!" It was a really great day. And I think we drank a lot of beer and played pool that Madigan may seem a "bot" actress now, but she said her phone was not exactly ring-ing off the hook with offers. "I am an unemployed person for the first time in a long time and it feels just fine," she said. "I'm also in a different situation. I can pick and choose a little. But people are not breaking down my door, I'm not getting offered a lot. But I feel sometimes that these parts are picking me, in a sense. And if I don't take some time for just myself, I'll be closing myself off to a lot of

"I mean, how many movies do you see that you really like? There are not that many parts to begin with, and women's parts - forget it. You're either the prostitute or now there's this rash of this contemporary woman who's like the city D. A., who's divorced, who has these two fabulous kids and can take care of them, and also has a great sex life — that superwoman kind of thing. That's why I like to attend a papal Mass has raised controversy in the London press and brought some contradictory comment from British clergy. Viccomment from British clergy. Victor Chapman, deputy press secretary for Buckingham Palace, said in Rome that plans for the royal couple to attend Pope John Paul II's private morning Mass in the Vatican's Pauline Chapel were dropped for lack of time. He said the prince's mother, Queen Elizabeth II, played no part in the decision.

The Times of London reported, however, that Buckingham Palace however, that Buckingham Palace blocked the Mass because of fears that it would offend Protestant traditionalists, particularly in Scotland and Northern Ireland. It said, without attribution, that Charles, 36, was "highly indignant," be-cause he had hoped to become the first British heir to the throne to attend a papal Mass since 1534, when King Henry VIII broke with Rome. But the palace press secretary, Michael Shea, said in London that it was Charles who made the final desicion after consulting the final decision, after consulting the queen. The prince and princess have ended a four-day visit to Rome and flown to Catania, Sicily, for two days of relaxation and craising in the Mediterranean aboard the royal yacht Britannia. The Rev. Ian Palsiey, a Free Pres-byterian minister and leader of the Democratic Unionist Party in Northern Ireland, said the heir to the throne and future temporal head of the state Church of England should never have considered going to a "blasphemons" service. The moderator of the Church of Scotland, the Right Reverend John Paterson, said that he would have warned of "some difficulties and

Paul Newman and the director George Roy Hill have accused Universal Pictures, in a federal court suit in Los Angeles, of cheating them out of more than $600,000 on revenues from videocasette sales of the movies "Slap Shot" and "The Sting."
